The sequel to Paranormal Romance Guild's 2016 Reviewer's Choice Nominee "Forever Love" "At least I'm not sick, just halfway to immortality, but now it seems like halfway may be as far as I get." Although rescued from her kidnapers, Sidney Sheppard isn't safe. She'll soon be immortal, but there's a catch. A vial containing the immortality drug is missing and the clock is ticking to replace it. Bastien St. Clair is tasked to translate his father's notes and synthesize Sidney's final dose. If he fails, the woman he's loved for years dies. To complicate matters, add in Bastien's thirteen-year-old daughter who can start fires with her mind and three scared and confused women with out-of-control paranormal abilities. Surrounded by distractions, Bastien has just six days to translate nearly unreadable journals and synthesize the proper drug. All the while falling deeper in love with Sidney. Sidney never wanted to be immortal. If given a choice, she would have politely declined the offer. But she wasn't given a choice and the longer she's around Bastien, the more she wants to live forever with him. However, if Bastien doesn't succeed, that won't happen. It's a good thing, then, that she has all the confidence in the world in his abilities. Too bad he doesn't.
