From the streets of a Midwest city to the dusty, fetid paths of ancient Jerusalem, a conspiracy unfolds that could forever change the world - and the past. Retired U.S. Army Major David Speer finds himself in a race against - and through - time to stop it while he leads the most daring and important rescue mission in history. Consumed by guilt over an unspeakable act of violence he was forced to commit during the Iraq war, David is obsessed with finding forgiveness in the dark loneliness of the confessional of his boyhood Catholic Church. This obsession has made him vulnerable to the machinations of one of the country's wealthiest men, M. Clifton Prather. Prather has recruited David to lead a mission that he says will bring David the solace he so desperately seeks and at the same time will bring peace to the world. Prather does not tell David that if successful, the mission will allow Prather and a cabal of powerful business, government and religious leaders to finalize their plans. Prather's loyal chief of security will stop at nothing, including murder, to see that the group's plot will come to fruition. This conspiracy will bring the plotters untold power and will change the world forever.
