Rimonah was born with skin as dark as a pomegranate's peel and a voice as sweet as a pomegranate's juice, and she was the fairest in all the land. She never knew a moment's sorrow until the day her mother, the queen, died. Soon after, a cunning sorceress tricked the king into marrying her, and then, seething with jealousy, she plotted to kill Rimonah. But as Rimonah grew to be a fear horsewoman, her goodness and bravery saved her time and again from her evil stepmother's malicious trickery. Beautiful and brave, Rimonah of the Flashing Sword is rewarded in this North African version of Snow White.
