One girl. Two lives. By day, Sophie Cassou is a student of political science and economics at La Sorbonne in Paris. By night, she is Amaia Sagastizabal, second-in-command of The Organisation, a nationalist liberation group that is considered the most serious terrorist threat to Spain. When Sophie runs into her ex-boyfriend, Luran, their meeting sets in motion a series of events that put her two lives on a dangerous but unavoidable collision course. There can be no more secrets. Risking everything for a chance to regain lost love, Sophie begins to let the world see both sides of who she is and struggles to justify her choices - to the boyfriend she abandoned, to the brother who took her in, to the best friend she has kept secrets from and most of all, to herself.
