Follow the Spanish Conquest of the Americas through first-person action accounts. In Conquistador Voices you will hear explorers, conquistadors, and, in some cases native peoples--aided by the author as narrator--tell us what they themselves saw and did during the Conquest. To make such 500-year-old "sound bites" attractive to the modern reader, fresh translations of much of this material have been made from Spanish and Italian sources. In this book, written for the general reader, you are likely to learn much more about those epic times than you ever learned in school. Volume II is devoted to the conquest of Peru and the Incas by Francisco Pizarro and his brothers; to the Narváez expedition and subsequent years-long odyssey of Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca through North American deserts; and to the disastrous expedition of Hernando de Soto to today's southeastern United States. Eight maps accompany the text. An index, copious footnotes, and brief bibliography are also included. 428 pp.
