Rosamund Jones-Keyes is a single mother living in Atlanta, Georgia, with her nine-year-old daughter, Caryl. Their lives become far from mundane when, after taking on a job at a chemical company, Rosamund is confronted by a coworker, Jeffrey Shuggs. Mr. Shuggs believes that the company is involved in a cover-up operation that could affect the lives of many people. He asks her to help him investigate this alleged conspiracy in order to potentially save the lives of numerous individuals. However, their exploration and examination of the facts does not go unnoticed. Someone seems to know about their plan and attempts to stop them from getting too close to the truth. In order to try and make a better life for Caryl, Rosamund asks her Aunt Pet to come and live with them. Aunt Pet watches after Caryl when she gets home from school and tells her about their family history. Caryl confides in Aunt Pet about some of her recent dreams, and Aunt Pet tells her that it may be her connection to their ancestors. This is just the beginning of Caryl's exploration into her family lines. At school she meets Darren, whom she will soon find out shares a closer bond with her than either of them could have imagined. In this fascinating story of finding alliances in unsuspected places, everyone's true loyalties are revealed.
