Columba Riverford fights off a magical sword to gain entrance and membership into the Hall of Swords. During his induction, the sacred sword Genesyx is stolen, and Columba is accused of its theft. Aridisia Myric beguiles a spell-scribe at the Crypt of Scrolls and puts herself in his place. As she's about to be granted membership, the One Scroll Canodex vanishes, and Aridisia is accused of its theft. Baron Marl Gneiss prestidigitates himself an audience in the Vault of Stones. Even as he's denied induction, the One Stone Luxullian disappears from the Vault, and Marl is accused of its theft. Banished, all three set out on a journey to recover the respective Sword, Scroll, or Stone, and to restore their good names. The absence of the missing talismans launches an increasing amount of chaos, as miscreants and ne'er-do-wells grow ever more bold. All three gradually become aware of an ancient Necromancer who weaves them into his plot to destroy the ancient order of magic. And the precious merchandise they unwittingly carry toward him.
