Tonya Fielding has made a career out of writing about ordinary people that do extraordinary things. Just this once she wishes she could be the person that does something extraordinary and show her billionaire brother that she really can make it on her own merits. When she learns that someone has been sabotaging the campground owned by sweet, cookie-baking Ruby Burrows, she realizes she can finally get her extraordinary moment by using her journalistic skills to catch the culprit. The last thing on her mind is falling in love... until she meets mysterious newcomer, Brandon Denton. Brandon Denton never gets attached, his job as undercover DEA agent isn't conducive to long-term relationships. He has one mission - to catch the leader of a drug ring suspected to be operating in a small Montana mountain town. There's one catch, people in the small town are suspicious of strangers and no one will give him information. When a self act puts Brandon on Tonya's radar and she wants to write an article about him, he sees a way to earn trust from the whole town. Brandon and Tonya keep their investigations secret, but when those investigations have them turning up in the same places, sparks fly. Suddenly there is a lot more at stake than either of them bargained for. But can love blossom when it's built on a lie?
