A bi-curious duke must marry an heiress before rumors of his scandalous past surface. London, 1865: The Duke of Belmonte must marry before rumors of his past life ruin any chance of making an advantageous match. When he meets Lady Katherine Smithson, more than her luscious body and sharp wit intrigue him. Like him, her birth and station afford her many liberties, but at a price. Lady Katherine Smithson had given up hope of finding a man liberal enough to tempt her into marriage until she meets Lord Belmonte. She doesn't question her decision to marry him until he reveals a shocking truth about himself: one that could ruin their lives. Belmonte is determined to leave his old life behind, but because of his past relationship with another man, he is unsure if his burning lust for his new bride will last. His resolve is sorely tested when his ex-lover comes to England to win back his affections. Will he give into temptation and risk everything to be with Dante? Or will his budding love for Katherine win out? Warning: This novella is intended for mature readers over 18 years of age. It contains a bi-curious sexy alpha male, and a sexually adventurous and plucky heroine. Please refrain from reading this novella if candid sexual scenes offend you.
