Brad and Jason had been stepbrothers for several years and never much got along. They were too different. Brad was an all-star quarterback in college and Jason more reserved and brainy. When Brad comes home for the summer, Jason is not looking forward to his visit, but he realizes quickly that something about Brad has changed. He is being nice to him and though he's suspicious, he finds himself going on a camping trip with him and a friend of Jason's. Disaster strikes and Brad steps up to save his stepbrother, staying with him through his recovery. Jason finds himself falling for him and tries to keep it to himself. Jason can't keep it in forever though and one slip exposes him. Instead of being upset though, Brad helps him with his needs and it leaves the two of them unsure where they stand. Will Brad be able to convince Jason that he really cares, or will Jason take off across the country to keep denying his feelings for his stepbrother?
