All Mya Taylor wants is to be loved and thought she would find that love with the father she never knew. To her joy, her father accepted her and treated her like his long lost daughter, but there was one obstacle in her path of true happiness, Hunter Mason, adopted son of her father Henry Trent. From the moment she stepped into their lives he never hide his mistrust of her and displayed it whenever he was in her presence. Hunter Mason felt like he had been punched in the gut when the beautiful Mya Taylor waltzed in to his family's life. She was the daughter of the woman that attempted to kill his father many years ago. It did not matter that he felt a strong attraction for Mya he was not going to allow her to ruin his family. His mistrust of her was obvious and he did not mind sharing his feelings about it her with the rest of his family.
