Prince. Druid. Murderer. Fugitive. Ciaran and Coivin: cousins, foster-brothers and Dark Twins in Seventh Century Ireland. Destined to rule, they have been sent to be instructed in the Law, in swordsmanship and battle-tactics at the Druid college at Innisgarbh. The regime is brutal and their training is harsh. Ciaran learns that he has the Sight - the ability to see what might happen before it takes place. But it is a Gift from capricious Powers: are his Visions true? If they are, what should he make of the horror he foresees: his foster-brother and Dark Twin dead at his feet and a blood-soaked sword in his own hand? How could he kill his own heart's pith? What punishment will be his if he doesn't escape this destiny? Ciaran strives with every fibre of his being to avoid this terrifying future. All he wants is as peaceful a life as a Prince in Dark Age Ireland could manage. But Fate has other ideas. Innisgarbh is the first story about Prince Ciaran the Damned, a man alone in 7th Century Ireland, Britain and Europe. Watch out for others in the series: Lockeran, Cromm's Children and more.
